The Development of Animal Law in France: Building Bridges

Alice Di Concetto Comparative Animal Law Fellow Animal Law & Policy Program Harvard Law School

Introduction

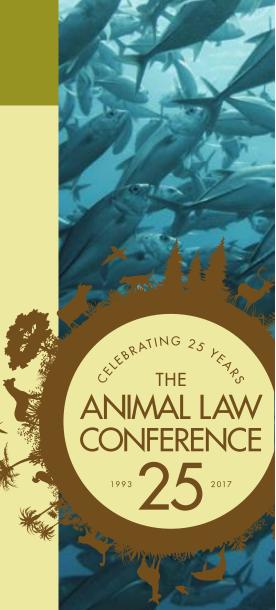

Animal Law as a developing field of legal studies in France

What's so special about France?

- Legal tradition: Civil Law
- = Latin America, Southern Europe

- No college, law School = 5 years, "education as a right" approach = virtually free for all students.
- French politics: decreased funding for universities.

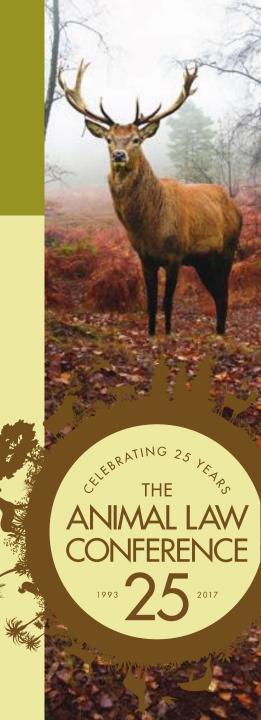

Introduction: Animal Law as a developing field of legal studies in France

More than an emerging, a developing field From animal studies (Derrida, de Fontenay, Burgat, Pelluchon)

→ To animal law

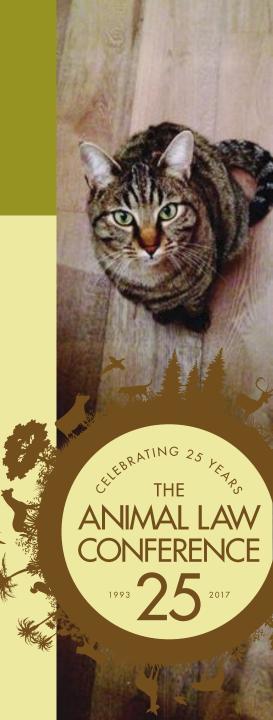

- Animal law as part of social studies curricula
- 3 animal law survey courses offered in 3 different law schools
- + 1 animal law review (dir. Pr. Marguénaud).
- 1 animal law clinical project since September 2017
- But still no Master's degree in animal law at this point in France: pros and cons

Roadmap

- I. Connecting France to the rest of the world
- 1. Enriching French research in animal law
- 2. Innovating in education: importing legal clinics from US law schools to French universities

- II. Connecting grassroots activists to policymakers
- 1. Context: the animal protection movement in France
- 2. The need for a more policy-focused scholarship

I. Connecting France to the rest of the world

1. Enriching French scholarship

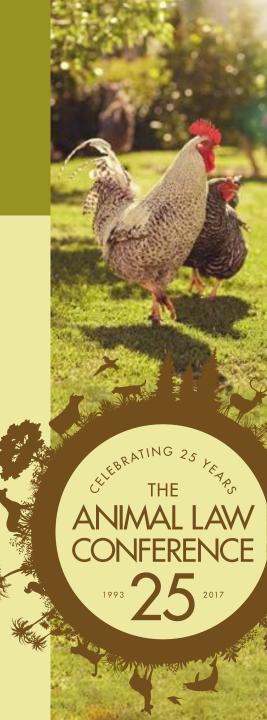

English is the new French!

Animal law classes and programs in Europe

In Europe: the Educational Group for Animal Law Studies (EGALS)

initiative

What's still missing: connection to the Anglo-American scholarship (and beyond).

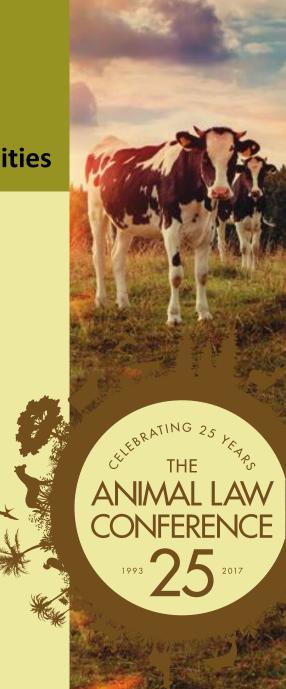

2. Innovating in education: The example of the import of legal clinics from US law schools to French universities

- Provide students with practical legal education
- Provide assistance to communities (access to justice as a right)
- Develop synergies within the legal profession
- Easily adaptable to foreign cultures

Ex.: Sciences Po (Paris) clinic.

Sciences Po ÉCOLE DE DROIT

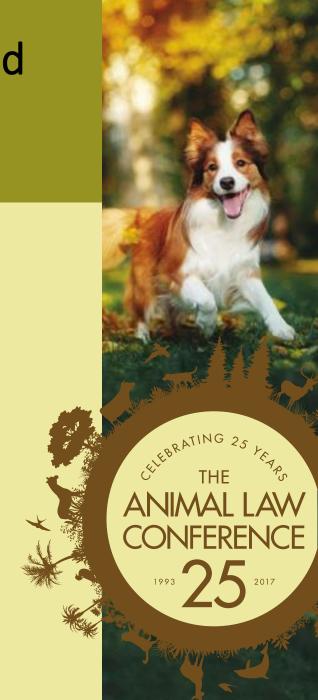

II. Filling the gap between grassroots activism and policymaking

1. The animal protection movement in France

- The proliferation of factory farming as a game changer
- Much more anchored in politics than in the US
 Abolitionnists & welfarists

"anti-speciesists" (gaining momentum) & neo-liberal critique

2. The need for a more policy-focused scholarship

 Developing research beyond theoretical debates and provide activists and policy-makers with tangible legal research

Ex.: Enforcement mechanisms of (numerous) already-existing anticruelty laws? Harmonizing EU regulations?

- → Legal Clinics as a way to conduct empirical research.
- Promoting a multi-disciplinary approach

Ex.: piggy-back on environmental law

- → The relevance of experiences abroad
- Favoring a less activist approach in scholarship and education
- = engage in uncomfortable discussions and more inclusiveness

Thank you

Special thanks to Jean Marc Neumann, executive secretary of EGALS, lecturer on animal law at University of Strasbourg.
